

Worker died in occupational accident at TPS

His death occurred after being hit by a crane

Issue of March 27, 2017

A worker from the port of Valparaíso died on Friday March 24, after being struck by an RTG crane during his workshift.

The accident occurred around 22:30 hours on site 5 of the terminal, so it was decided to dispatch the whole third shift of workers to their homes.

The company, through a statement, along with regretting the fact, revealed that the deceased was Hernán Vedia López, who worked in the place since 2009, and noted that "after the accident, all procedures previously established for emergency assistance of this type".

He added that "all the background and circumstances of this fact were made available to the Maritime Authority and all competent authorities for the full investigation of what happened."
