

Marine Terminal Worker Fatally Injured at Latvian Bulk Cargo Facility

Liepāja Port - 22 November 2017

From European sources, Blueoceana Company is made to understand that a young marine terminal worker lost his life last Wednesday (22 November) in the midst of a coal handling operation at the Port of Liepāja, Latvia. The worker's employer has been identified as Ekers Stividor, LP.

Shown above: Coal being moved by a front end loader at the Liepāja marine terminal.

Information coming to us, indicates that the as-yet unnamed worker had just concluded cleaning out a coal conveying wagon when, upon alighting to ground level, he was struck by a large Volvo front end loader. The twenty four year old worker's death was reportedly instantaneous.

The loader's direction of movement at the time is presently unknown to us . We understand, however, that the loader's operator has indicated that he simply did not see the worker in the moments leading up to the accident.

Shown above: Ekers Stividor's ship loading activity at Liepaja.

Should further information become available, this posting will be updated accordingly.

