

東森新聞

Going to work on the first day... The elevator suddenly fell at the Taipei port

2019/07/29 15:04 Dongsen News Responsibility Editor Zhuang Yating

In Taipei Port, a work accident occurred yesterday (28th). A 45-year-old Huang surnamed worker, working on the first day, was repairing a wire curtain. Unexpectedly, the elevator about three meters from his head suddenly fell for unknown reasons, causing him to be crushed on the spot. The injury was not cured. After the family members of the deceased received the bad news, it was difficult to accept. The anger questioned whether the project was negligent and it would lead to an accident.

On the day of the incident, Huang's worker and another colleague went to Taipei Port, Bali District, New Taipei City to repair the elevator protection net in the container bridge machine. It was not expected that around 5 pm, the elevator about three meters high above his head was Suddenly, he was unable to move because of the embarrassment of the elevator. He couldn't move. The colleague saw the case and rushed to the police to ask for assistance. However, Huang Nan was seriously injured and he was still killed for medical treatment. After the accident, the maintenance work has also been suspended, and the investigation is fully coordinated.

▼The accident occurred in Taipei Port. (Photo / Dongsen News)

In response to this accident, Lin Biao, general manager of the Taipei Port Container Terminal Company, said, "We have always been working with safety as the top priority, and we will fully cooperate with the inspection authorities and the investigations of the inspection units."

As for the exact cause of this accident, whether it is a machine failure or a man-made disaster will be the focus of the prosecution's investigation of this accident.