[Cable News] A worker fell into the sea in Tsim Sha Tsui and died after being rushed to the hospital. The Labor Department is investigating the accident.

The man was taken to the hospital by ambulance, and the ambulance crew used an automatic external cardiac compressor to give him first aid.

At about 12 noon, the worker was suspected of slipping and falling into the sea while working in the unloading area of Ocean Terminal. Firefighters arrived at the scene to rescue him and handed him to the marine police to be taken ashore at the pier.

The Labor Department expressed condolences to the family, saying that it has dispatched personnel to investigate and if violations are found, they will be dealt with in accordance with the law. It also urged employers to abide by the preventive measures stipulated in the law to ensure the safety of workers at work.
